

Aid Effectiveness for the next decade

Rahul Malhotra

Reviews, Results, Evaluation & Development Innovation
Division

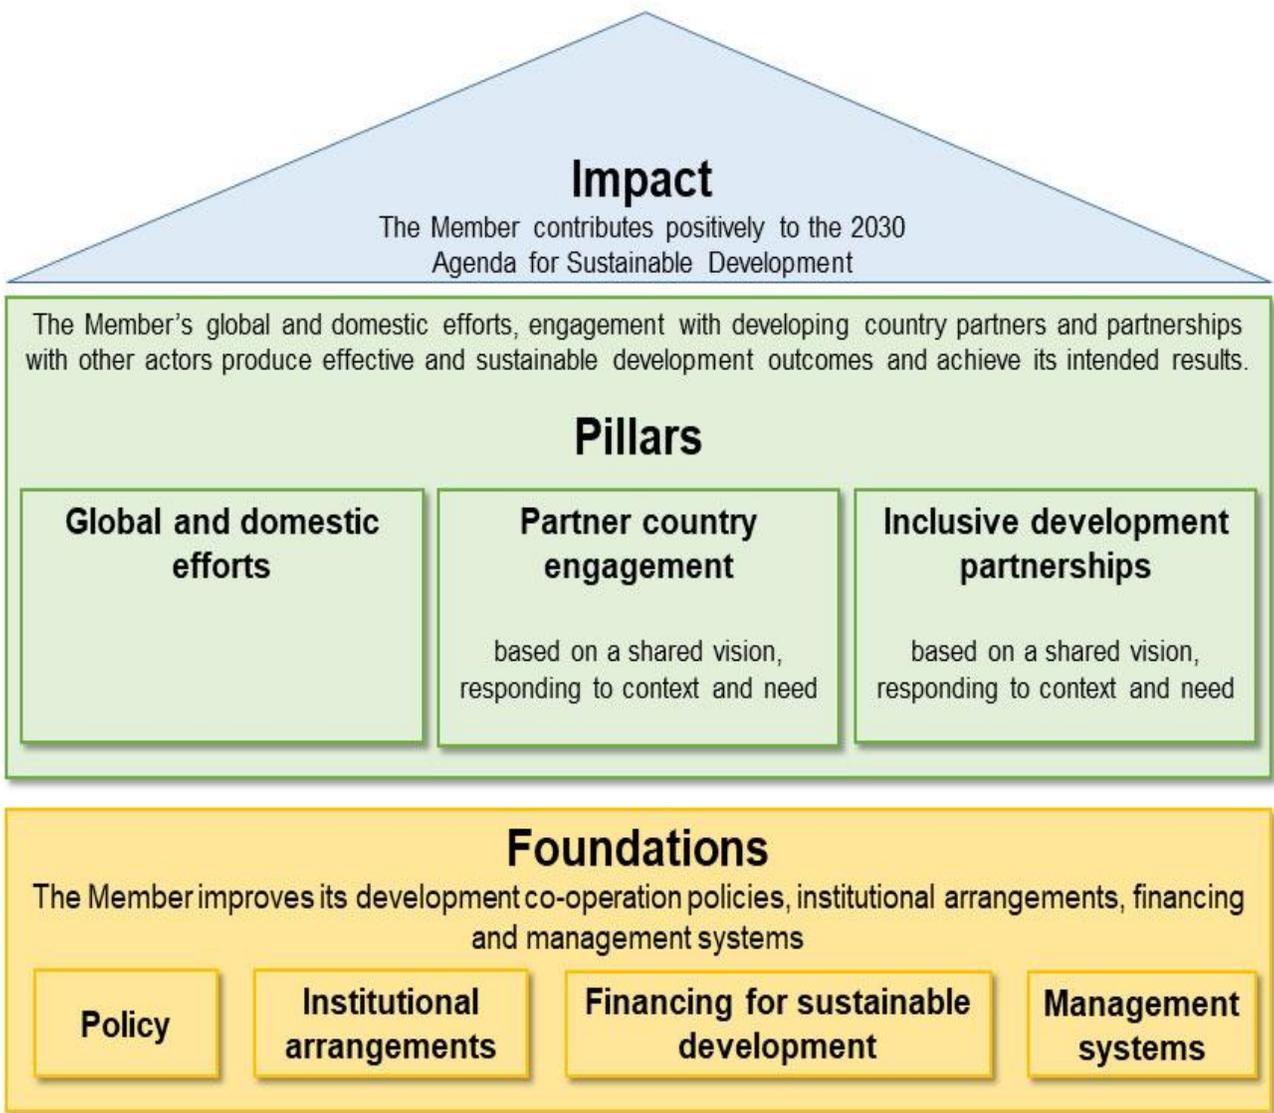

January 2021

RREDI
Development Co-operation Directorate

OECD

A new theory of change: OECD DAC Peer Reviews

A new manifesto for change

A CALL FOR A CHANGE OF COURSE IN DEVELOPMENT CO-OPERATION

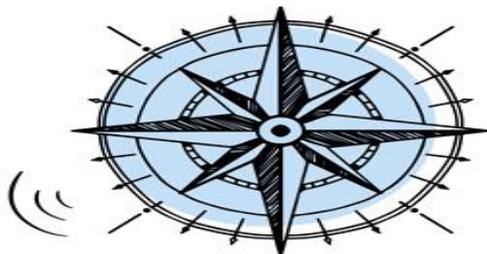

OECD DAC governments and their development agencies need to show through words, actions and investments that development co-operation is fit to take on 21st century challenges and open to working with diverse actors for long-term development results.

THE REPORT CALLS FOR A CHANGE OF COURSE AND ACTION ON THREE FRONTS.

1

NARRATIVE, MODERNISE IT TO:

- Harness human solidarity and interests, focusing on tangible local actions and solutions to big issues that people care about.
- Respect the right and responsibility of each nation to chart its own course towards sustainable development, with due respect for the universal rights of all peoples and generations.
- Update words and language to shift perceptions to empowering all people and show how we all gain from progress in human well-being in other parts of the world.

2

RETOOL, BE FIT FOR PURPOSE TO:

- Champion and safeguard the essence and value of concessional public finance for development in leaving no one behind.
- Step-up action for gender equality, which is fundamental for all societies – not only because it is right, but also because it provides keys to unlock the doors to progress.
- Invest in green and clean development co-operation, breaking silos between climate and development to promote people-centred, climate-resilient development pathways.
- Uphold, update and promote high standards, expertise and good practices on what works for sustainable development and well-being.

3

TEAM UP, SMARTLY, TO:

- Reignite the spirit of effective development co-operation, especially in the face of short-term political and economic interests and pressures that are inconsistent with sustainable development.
- Catalyse knowledge, innovation, financing and capacity by teaming up smartly with public, private and civil society actors, being informed by their unique value, and equipped with the right incentives and safeguards.
- Co-ordinate across different policy communities to promote coherence in all areas of public policy and citizenship, with the aim to maximise global public goods while minimising any negative effects on sustainable development in other parts of the world.

... and back to the future!

A TO-DO LIST FOR GREATER RESILIENCE

-  Integrate climate action in multi-sector development strategies
-  Provide long-term support for country systems
-  Avoid a development finance crisis
-  Step up collective action to provide and protect global public goods
-  Enhance collective development co-operation strategies and processes for crisis co-ordination

Rahul Malhotra

Head of Division
Reviews, Results, Evaluation & Development
Innovation,
Development Co-operation Directorate, OECD

2, rue André Pascal - 75775 Paris Cedex 16
Tel: +33 1 45 24 15 07 – Mob: +33 7 89 43 90 40

rahul.malhotra@oecd.org || www.oecd.org

Twitter: @rahulmalparis

Linkedin: linkedin.com/in/rahul-malhotra-658aab75

DEVELOPMENT CO-OPERATION REPORT 2020
LEARNING FROM CRISES, BUILDING RESILIENCE

oe.cd/DCR20

Join the conversation on Twitter:
@OECDDev & #ResilientTogether

The OECD Development Co-operation Report 2019
A FAIRER, GREENER, SAFER TOMORROW
Website: oe.cd/dev-coop